LINDSAY GRICE BIO

Coach, trainer, equine behaviourist and judge, Lindsay Grice, has prepared horses and riders for wins at major horse shows in the US and Canada for over 20 years. Starting her career on the hunter A circuit, she continues to actively compete in both english and western events, specializing now in the AQHA circuit.

Lindsay teaches Equine Behaviour for several University of Guelph courses. She draws on the principles of equine psychology and sports psychology to bridge the communication gap between horses and riders. In her popular clinics she explains both the "hows" and "whys" of training and showing.

Lindsay is an Equine Canada judge and AQHA specialized judge, as well as a certified Equine Canada and NCCP (multi event) coach.

When asked what she loves about her job, Lindsay responds, "I love putting complex principles of riding into a language that riders can understand. As someone who's been there – forgotten courses, made training mistakes, listened to hollering coaches and still made it to the winner's circle, I share with my students the keys I wish I'd known."
